Dear Parents/Guardians,

One of our "Wildly Important Goals" is for students to have their homework complete each week. In order to be complete, students should have a total of 100 minutes of reading, and a total of 50 minutes of math fact practice for the week. Also, if we have any math worksheets, they should be completed as well. I am very understanding when students do not have their homework on time. When this happens, the students make a plan for completing their homework. As long as it is completed by Monday (this gives students a chance to make it up over the weekend) I will count it. Students who have all of their homework completed on time (20 minutes of reading and 10 minutes of math fact practice each night) for the week earn a classroom money bonus to reward their responsible behavior. Thank you for supporting your child with his/her homework at home.

With that being said, if we reach our goal of 80% of the students having their homework complete this week, the students will not have homework next week during our testing week. This will be determined on Monday after I check their planners.

If you have any questions or concerns, please contact me by phone or email.
